48 McAnany, Patrick D. Conflicting information: [photo caption] Although somewhat ravished by time, this former home of Frederic Choteau, member of the famous family of early day traders, still remains largely as it was in the days before the Civil War. . . The house now is owned by the McAnany estate. A stone addition, a portion of which may be seen above the roof of the original house, was added when it was the McAnany homestead. The huge fireplaces at either end of the building still remain as they were a century ago. “Century-Old Homes Still Serve” Sunday Picture Journal July 21, 1940
